MACROCOSMI – PATTERNS OF AN OTHER ORDER

This project of a dialogue between Bologna and Berlin includes not only common presentations of galleries in both cities but also two pioneering exhibitions. In the Old Postfuhramt West and in the Kunstfabrik am Flutgraben works by over 50 artists of all media and generations meet in answering the question about other or new modes of expression in contrast to conventional forms, perceptions and ways of thinking.

The project initiated by Pascual Jordan and curated in collaboration with Petra Dregger takes place this year for the first time and is applied on continuation, with exhibitions in spring in Italy and in Germany in September. The association of Berlin galleries (LVBG), Galerie di Bologna, the art center CUBO Centro Unipol Bologna and the Academy of Fine Arts of Bologna co-operate in this project. The patronage for the project under the umbrella of Foundation "Forum of Cultures of questions of our time" have been adopted by the German Embassy in Rome and the Italian Embassy in Berlin. "MACROCOSMI" is a partner of the art fair POSITIONS BERLIN 2015.

5 students of the Academy of Fine Arts in Bologna (Bianca Schroeder, Francesca Susca, Arianna Battistella / Noemi Diamantini and Tiziana De Felice) under the organization and direction of Prof. Eleonora Frattarolo were selected from the participants of the video workshop of Branka Pavlović in January, to present their videos in Berlin.

Curatorial Statement:

Systems of other kinds can be manifested in many different ways, in formal and thematic aspects, sociological, philosophical or conceptual. They come in nature, in physics, in biology and touching gender issues, social systems and other ways of life. The orders of another kind are not necessarily new, but different, ie Forms of networking and organization are not hierarchical or linear, the screen layout is not a central perspective, the results are not quantifiable or reconstructed.

In their exploration of unsuspected realities, of transitions from the representational to the unknown and the invisible in the visible, some works are in the tradition of André Breton's Surrealism and its opening of the traditional expression and concentrates on the imaginary, dreamlike, visionaries. Other works are reminiscent again of movements such as the "arte povera" or "Ambiente come sociale", expressed in the full range of our present means and media.

So the orders of another kind can manifest in insights into other life forms like Boris Mikhailov and Benjamin Reich, dark sides in confusing beautiful, almost painterly photographs made by Pierre Jouve or of solitude, obscure obsessions and existential absurdities told by the video and photographic works of Alexandra Ranner. Other orders are clearly visible in Mary Bauermeister Structural Tachism or in the work of Mike Steiner, both have tried out new ways which proved to be visionary. Or they show up in large scale structures when Ingeborg zu Schleswig-Holstein and Rudolf zur Lippe reveal us the soothing power of large gestures in the smartphone era while Erik Andersen, Jofroi Amaral and Saâdane Afif play in their works with our habits of perception.

All works open up to new perspectives, they can serve as an inspiration and as an excitation for (self-) reflection. And all of them throw us ultimately back to the great questions of human existence, to which Gwenneth Boelens in her auratic work finds very personal and at the same time possible general answers.

Is it time to consider a new surrealism in its most radical claim? Is poetry the real revolution?
